Rich's "Correct" Footwear

Will be in evidence everywhere today—particularly among the best dressers. The selling of the past few weeks is greater than that of any pre-Easter season, which is evidence of the enormous increasing popularity of Rich's Swell footwear.

In no previous season have the fashions been quite so captivating—or quite so distinctively exclusive. More novelties are here and in greater variety.

Particular attention is directed to the new "Jessica" Ties of dull and brilliant leathers, which fasten at the side—a novelty which you find here only.

Recently arrived shipments of Sailor Ties, Paris Ties, Gibson Ties, Christy Ties and Venus Pumps, etc., again complete Rich's unmatched assortment, which the demands of the past few weeks have necessarily depleted.

The passing of Easter marks the beginning of the season of weddings in social life, and those who will participate will find here an immense assortment of footwear, embracing over a hundred shades in the materials which are in vogue. Brides-to-be can buy here footwear for the entire trousseau, including the footwear for traveling, for wear at the seashore, for playing at the various sports which are the diversion of society.

CONGRESSIONAL SIDE SHOW

Representative R. B. Grogan of Arkansas.

Ladies and gentlemen, the big test is rather dull these days. The performances languish; the acrobats seem overtrained; some of the trained elephants are terribly sullen; the donkeys bray discordantly and pound one another with their nimble heels. Let us forsake the middle ring; let us turn our attention to one of the minor attractions; let us gaze upon the expressive countenance of the Arkansas feudist.

Ladies and gentlemen, I refer to the member from the first Arkansas district. He was born at Macon; he was christened Robert Bruce. And yet with this handicap he has managed to scale the heights and descend into the gloomy crater of democratic membership in Congress.

Ladies and gentlemen, the Honorable Robert Bruce is unique in his day and generation. He is of no particular consequence in the House of Representatives. In this respect he is like the people of this fair land, sitting up nights to read his speeches. He doesn't believe that anybody outside of his district cares a hang when he was born, whether he is a laborer or a boiler maker, whether he is married or single, whether he has a couple of children or believes in the Rokeby propagation process, or whether he served as school commissioner of Jonesville or tax collector at Smith's crossroads. The Honorable Robert Bruce is of no particular moment in the general scheme of things. He has slathers of company, too. But, by Heck, the Honorable Bruce is dead wise to the fact. He is on.

Perhaps, you wonder, ladies and gentlemen, I discovered that the Honorable Robert Bruce is an Arkansas feudist. List while I explain a few. During the fifty-eighth Congress the Honorable Robert Bruce was a member of the House. I wasn't aware of the fact. Neither was anybody else outside of the first Arkansas district. But, ladies and gentlemen, the Honorable Robert Bruce knew it. He didn't think that the good people of California hung around in the vineyards discussing his speeches. He didn't have any idea that the Equimos of the frozen north read his utterances by incandescent light. He knew that in the six months night of the north diversions are few. But he didn't believe the Equimos ever got as desperate as that.

And so, ladies and gentlemen, time rolled on. The Fifty-eighth Congress came and went. The Fifty-ninth Congress was born. And it was not until the other day that I discovered the Arkansas feudist. It was during the debate on the southern mail subsidy. I saw the light. There was a lull in the debate. The Honorable Robert Bruce secured the floor. He was as white as chalk. He was as cold as an icicle. And drawing himself up to his impressive height of five feet two, he spoke. "Yesterday," he began, as a film of ice formed in the glass of water on his desk, the gentleman from North Carolina, Small, charged me with having uttered a libel against certain railroad officials. Then and there I saw a well-known figure. The statement to that effect was an infamous libel against me.

Then, ladies and gentlemen, the temperate turned around. The air grew chill. My teeth chattered. I longed for red flannel and overcoats. 'Twas the Honorable Robert Bruce! Let us draw the veil over this powerful scene. Of the Honorable Bruce's remarks I will not speak. My reply will not mention the reply not coherent when the vocal chords are frozen. A rejoinder is moving swiftly south. Since then I have dogged the Arkansas feudist.

Death of Mrs. M. P. Kloeber. Information has been received here of the death of Mrs. Mattie Pomeroy Kloeber, wife of Dr. J. S. Kloeber, and sister-in-law of Charles E. Kloeber, now proprietor of Nimrod Hall, Virginia, and formerly connected with the Associated Press in this city and New York.

In Memoriam. BOLAND. In sad but loving remembrance of my dear husband, JAMES BOLAND, who died three years ago today, April 15, 1903.

Go, but not forgotten. We laid him away in the silent grave, With four-dimmed eyes and broken heart; And little we thought when in life How soon we'd be apart.

BY HIS WIFE AND CHILDREN. CHEEK. In sad but loving remembrance of my dear beloved son, JOHN T. CHEEK, who died one year ago today, April 15, 1905, in his seventh year.

In memory of times dear: The one I loved so dear; The one who grew and broke sometimes I feel he must be near. But not! One year ago today, my darling John was called away Out of my mortal sight.

BY HIS LOVING MOTHER. He passed away like a summer breeze, With scarce a parting sigh; I passed from this world, And to dwell with Christ on high. Dear brother, you are not dead to me; I hold that you are ever near. Though death intrudes between, I'll never let you go.

BY HIS LOVING BROTHER, HARRY. HILL. In loving remembrance of our devoted mother, AMELIA A. HILL, and our dear sister, HENRIETTA HILL, both of whom left us five years ago today, April 15, 1901.

BY FAMILY. HURDLE. In loving memory of my dear wife, CLARA M. HURDLE, who departed this life two years ago today. Loved in life, and remembered in death. May she rest in peace.

BY HER HUSBAND. JACKSON. In loving remembrance of our dear mother, ELLEN M. JACKSON, who died four years ago today, April 15, 1902.

"Till the day break And the shadows flee away." BY HER CHILDREN, ESTELLE, ANDREW AND MABEL.

WENGER. In sad but loving remembrance of our dear wife and loving mother, ELIZABETH WENGER, who departed this life one year ago today, April 15, 1905.

BY HER DEVOTED HUSBAND AND CHILDREN. FUNERAL DIRECTORS.
